In many cities it is impossible to avoid noise from traffic, car stereos, mobiles, radios, neighbours and TVs. The most irritating noise is the "musik" - awful background music we have to listen to in the cafes, restaurants, shops, airports, stations and even on the streets. This music is supposed to calm people down but is actually having the opposite effect!

3.2. ____

Vending machines have completely changed shopping in Japan. You can buy everything from a machine: food, books or even clothes. You can have your nails painted or get a big black beetle which Japanese children like to keep as pets. Now, vending machines are coming to Europe and soon you will be able to do your shopping almost anywhere at any time. If you miss talking to the shop assistant, some machines will be able to talk to you too!!!

3.3. ____

Music is a great way to make dance tunes at home. There is a huge library with 750 sections of music called riffs. There are a lot of different instruments and styles and it is not difficult to make a really cool tune in a short time. When you finish your tune you can make a video; it will make a clip for you while you relax.

3.4. ____

Recently, a British chocolate company encouraged kids to swap their chocolate bar wrappers for sport equipment. As schools do not have enough money it is a great way to get some new sport equipment for PE lessons in this way. But some people criticize the idea saying it is ridiculous to encourage children to do more exercise by eating more chocolate.

3.5. ____

Die Another Day was filmed in Hawaii, Hong Kong, Spain, Iceland and London. In its story there is a machine that can change people's faces. James Bond is trying to catch Zao, a North Korean general who finds the machine and uses it to change his face. But the experiment goes wrong...

3.6. ____

Cameras that can read individual people's unique eye characteristics are being used in some English schools now. The scanner in the camera reads the patterns in the students' irises so that it can immediately identify the student. A human iris is as unique as a person's fingerprint.

3.7. ____

Texting has been a quick way of saying what you want but now picture messaging provides an even quicker way to express certain things.
